

FOUR FINDS

- 1 The lifestyle brand Cabana—founded by Martina Mondadori, whose family established the famed Italian publishing company Gruppo Mondadori—has launched its first signature scents, offering captivating candles and hand soaps in tuberose, fig, amber, and gardenia.
- 2 For their debut lighting collection, New York designers Christie Ward and Staver Gray, of Ward + Gray, drew inspiration from Venice's Lido. Each hand-blown glass piece—including the Capanna table lamp, named after the island's cabanas—is crafted by a family-run Venetian atelier.
- 3 Marc Ange, the Paris- and Los Angeles-based designer, has reimaged the billiards table as sculpture in a collaboration with the game-table maker 11 Ravens. The limited-edition Colosso features Italian leather pockets and can be customized with wood finishes, Kvadrat textiles, marble, and stone.
- 4 The Balmain Anthem (the name of the new handbag line draws on the many music artists the famed French house has dressed over the years) is in tune with nighttime as a playful clutch adorned with ostrich feathers and crystals. —Degen Peyer
